“By quarter-end, spreads had tightened to their lowest levels of the year, reflecting strong investor demand and continued confidence in corporate fundamentals.”

How did the Enhanced Cash portfolio perform during the quarter? How did this performance compare to the portfolio's benchmark?

Portfolios benchmarked to the Bloomberg U.S. Treasury Bellwethers 1 Year Index returned 0.81% in Q2 2026, outperforming the benchmark's 0.73% return by 8 bps. Year-to-date, the portfolios returned 1.56%, exceeding the benchmark's 1.40% return by 16 bps.

What factors had the greatest impact on the portfolio during the quarter?

Active sector positioning and security selection drove excess returns, contributing 10 bps of relative performance.

What sectors provided the greatest contribution to portfolio return?

As credit and structured product spreads narrowed from their early-quarter wides, modest overweights to corporate bonds (+4 bps) and high-quality asset-backed securities (+4 bps) contributed a combined 8 bps of relative performance as concerns over higher oil prices, persistent inflation, and slowing economic growth subsided.

What were among the strongest relative performing securities in the portfolio?

As market volatility declined during the second quarter and the Iran conflict moved toward a ceasefire, attractive opportunities emerged in U.S. agencies and mortgage-backed securities. Consistent with our government bond investment philosophy, security selection within agencies (+3 bps) and (+1 bps) added a combined 4 bps to relative performance.

Were there any sectors that hindered the portfolio's performance?

As risk assets broadly outperformed during the second quarter, no spread sector materially detracted from performance.

What were the weakest relative performing securities in the portfolio?

The rise of short-term interest rates triggered by lingering inflation fears caused longer dated treasuries to detract from performance, costing the portfolio 2 bps relative to the index.

What is your current outlook? How is the portfolio positioned based on your outlook?

Bond markets came under pressure during the quarter as geopolitical risks and persistent inflation concerns pushed interest rates higher. Treasury yields rose by as much as 50 basis points during the height of the Iran conflict, while the yield curve flattened as investors priced in a more restrictive monetary policy environment.

Corporate bond spreads initially widened by approximately 15 basis points from year-end levels but quickly recovered as economic conditions remained resilient. By quarter-end, spreads had tightened to their lowest levels of the year, reflecting strong investor demand and continued confidence in corporate fundamentals.

McKee portfolios remained active throughout the quarter, taking advantage of security-specific dislocations in the agency market. With spreads compressed and volatility relatively low, we see limited opportunity to add value through broad sector or macroeconomic positioning. Instead, we remain focused on generating consistent excess returns through disciplined security selection.

Although geopolitical developments and policy uncertainty are likely to continue creating periods of market volatility, we believe the fundamental backdrop remains supportive for risk assets.

Performance is presented in U.S. dollars and reflects total returns. "Gross" returns are shown before deduction of investment management fees, while "Net" returns reflect the deduction of actual investment management fees charged to client accounts included in the composite, which may vary. For illustrative purposes only, a $100 million account paying a 0.50% annual management fee and earning a 10% gross return compounded over 10 years would result in an approximate 9.5% net return. This example is hypothetical and not representative of actual client performance or fee arrangements. Fees are detailed in Part 2A of CS McKee's Form ADV.
